My story on RESERVE & Degenerative Disc Disease

RESERVE

At 44, I have an array of things going on that haven't been a picnic. The discs in my spine are herniated, bulging or have already deteriorated and are bone-on-bone from top to bottom, I have Degenerative Disc Disease and was told by several specialists that I needed a fusion five years ago. However, I also come from a family with various kinds of heart disease on my maternal and paternal sides of my family. So, when I learned about the incredible amounts of Resveratrol in just one gel pack (and it's hundreds of glasses of red wine, by the way), I knew I needed to order some. I had hoped the antioxidants would 'help' with my inflammation, but I assumed it wouldn't as my surgeon had just told me that my "back was completely eaten up with arthritis, as well, and that had I not been in his office, he would swear my MRI belonged to a 74-year-old instead of a 44-year-old! That also explained the intense pain I'd been feeling in my toes, feet and knees. What I couldn't fathom is what happened next. After taking one gel pack a day for a month, I lost my 69-year-old aunt unexpectedly to another heart attack; so, I doubled up on my Reserve. Within a week or so, I felt incredibly better and it continued. I wanted to be certain before I told anyone, but guess what? I ran out. I've been without it as I await my new shipment and know that it absolutely is the reason for my relief. I know this because it has started to hurt to even walk DOWN stairs again. Without one doubt, I will never run out again.
